UrbanStyle — Week 3: SQL JOINs Team Findings

Maria · Marvis · Daria · Reio

Anna Mets asked: who are our best customers, what sells, and where are we losing people?

Role A — Top Customers

Maria

Tallinn is UrbanStyle's strongest market (over €1.0M in customer spend). Top customer: Tiina Pärn, €27,668.02 across 73 purchases. ~29.9% of active customers spend above average — a clear high-value segment for Anna.

Role B — Lost Customers

Marvis

599 customers registered but never bought anything (Tallinn highest, 231). January was the month with the highest count of lost-customer registrations across five years — timing worth building a win-back campaign around.

Role C — Products & Inventory

Daria

12 products have never sold — and are completely absent from inventory too. Footwear leads category revenue (€774,034.75). 231 inventory records sit at/below reorder point; 10 show negative stock, needing validation first.

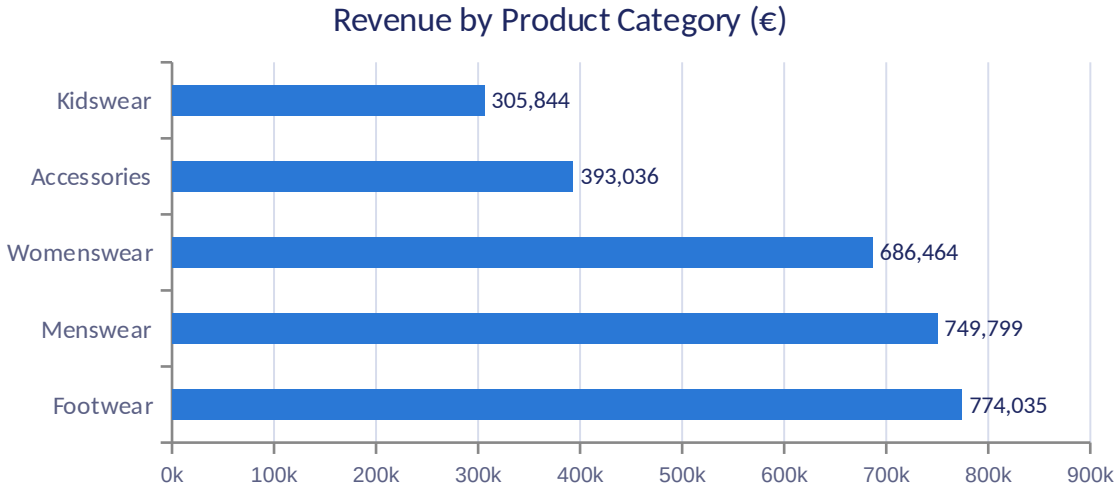

Role D — Sales Channels

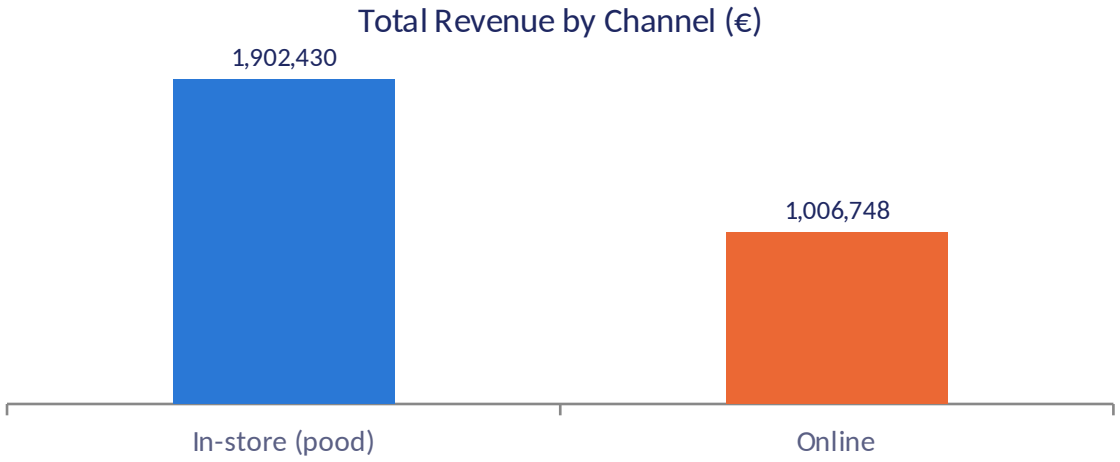

Reio

In-store (pood) beats online on every measure — €1.9M revenue and €835/customer vs online's €1.0M and €590/customer. But online already rivals Tallinn's entire store in revenue with zero physical footprint — underinvested, not underperforming.

The Numbers Behind the Findings

Revenue per Customer by Channel

€835

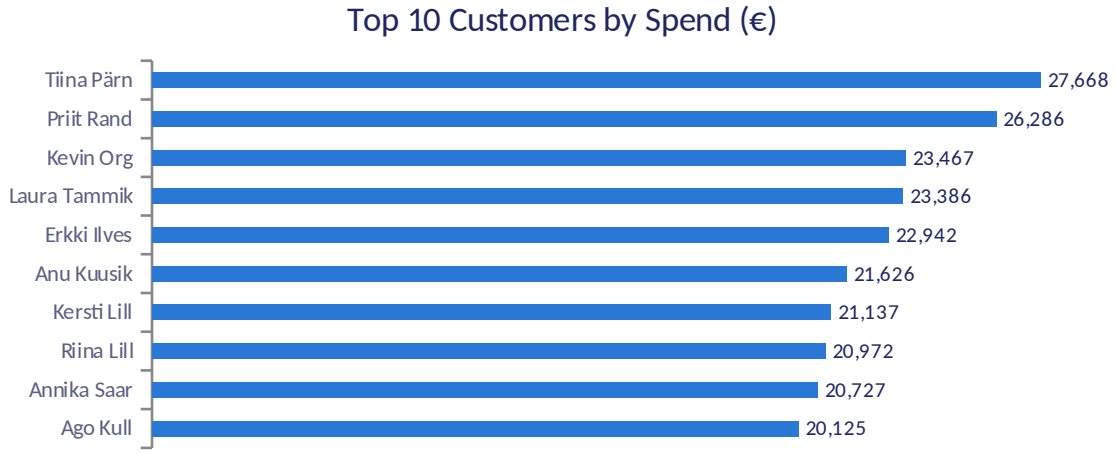

In-store (pood)

€590

Online

pood outperforms online on every base measure — but online alone already rivals Tallinn's total store revenue.

A Deeper Look

Sustained loyalty — 64 to 78 orders each, spread over ~2 years (2023-2025), not one-off big spenders.

Active vs. Lost Customers

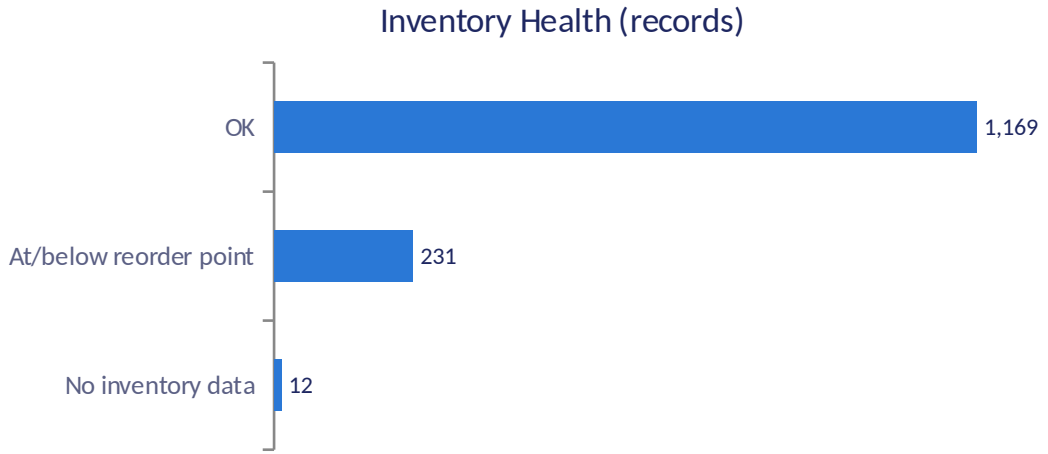

81%

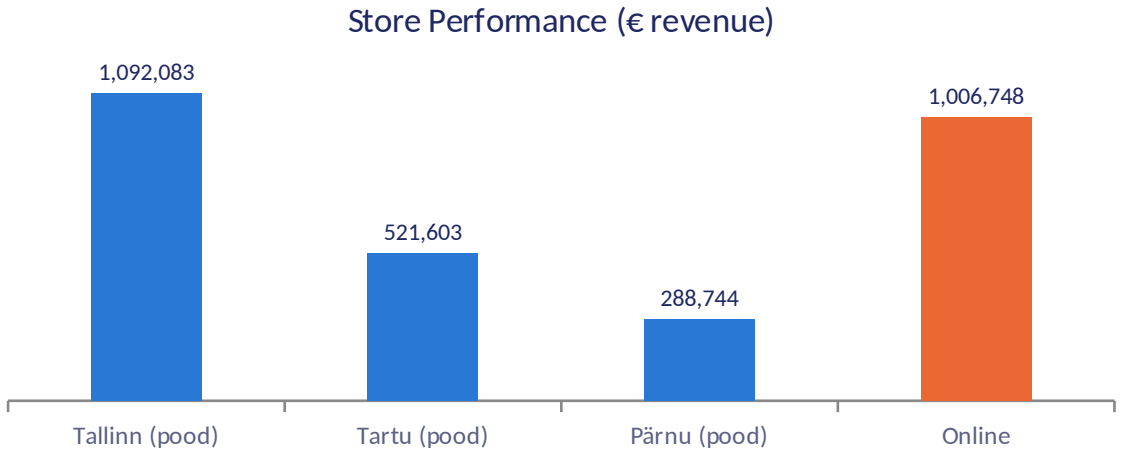

Active (2,551)

19%

Lost (599)

Just under 1 in 5 registered customers has never made a purchase.

Synthesis — What This Means for Anna

BIGGEST SURPRISE

Two roles hit the same wall from different angles: 1,024 purchasing customers have no loyalty tier recorded, and the 12 products that have never sold are also completely missing from inventory. Sometimes the biggest surprise is what's missing, not what's there.

RECOMMENDATION FOR ANNA

Target the high-value segment directly (Tallinn, above-average spenders); launch a win-back campaign for lost customers timed around the January registration peak; grow online specifically in Tartu and Pärnu; validate inventory data before any reorder decisions.

MISSING DATA

Loyalty-tier data for 1,024 customers; checkout drop-off, marketing-source, and browsing data to explain why customers abandon signup; current email engagement metrics; and clarity on whether the 12 never-sold products are new arrivals or discontinued.

PREPARING THE DEMO

CONCLUSION: UrbanStyle's core sales engine is strong — Tallinn, footwear, in-store — but real revenue is being left on the table in online growth and lost customers.

DECISION: Prioritize a January-timed win-back campaign and clean up loyalty-tier and inventory data before committing further marketing budget.

SURPRISED US: Online sales already rival Tallinn's entire physical store in revenue, despite having no dedicated location at all.